

Abstract

The mixture of metal and/or alloy particles and a liquid electrolytic medium has the property that the volume of the medium approximately corresponds to the spaces between the particles in a dry packing (for example, according to ASTM-B 212). This ensures a direct metallic contact between the particles.